>Worm holes are fickle things. No one has ever gotten close enough to really figure out what they did to a human being, except for four teens. Teens that had come through a worm hole created by a rabbit goddess as her last ditch effort to place their world under an unbreakable illusion.

Naruto Uzumaki was the first one to fall through. He had done his damnedest to keep everyone away from that black hole. It had howled and sucked in loose dirt and discarded weapons when it had opened it's yawning mouth. The pull was strong but stable for the most part and could have been ignored with the help of Chakra. The hole had turned unstable when Kaguya finally went down. The sudden spike in force levels had ripped Naruto off his feet and face first into the gaping blackness of the churning hole.

Kakashi Hatake was the second one to fall through. He had fought Kaguya with what little chakra he had left and as a result couldn't keep himself grounded when the pull suddenly got stronger. Had he been closer to the dimensional rift he would have been the first to be swallowed up.

Sasuke Uchiha and Sakura Haruno stood no chance against the gales of wind rushing into the opening. They had rushed forward to try and grab their teammates and missed a step. Sakura tumbled and rolled along the ground until she had fallen through. Sasuke had slid on his back all the way through.

The landing was harsh.

Where ever they had crash landed to was hard and made out of cement. It bruised ribs, broke wrists, strained muscles, and of course offered concussions. The world in their eyes had swam in dark blues and blacks before nothing at all.

All four of them landed on the top of a rather tall home.

>The first thing Sakura thought when she had come to was, ow then soft. Whatever it was that she was laying on was fluffy, it felt wonderful to her bruised and more than likely broken rib cage. She had frowned when memories of hitting the ground assaulted her throbbing brain.

She wrenched open her aching eyes and was relieved to see that whomever had taken her here had thought about keeping the lights low. She turned her head and forced her eyes closed as a wave of nausea swept over her making her vision swim. She groaned quietly and forced her small reserves of Chakra to her head to calm the throbbing.

She had taken the time to slowly mend her body as she laid prone to the world. It wouldn't do to be so weak when she didn't have a clue of where in the world she even was.

Within a twenty minute time frame she had deduced that she had a concussion, three fractured ribs, large bruises down her back, a strained muscle in the back of her right thigh and a dislocated arm that had been popped back into place. The joint was actually put back into place rather well but it wasn't completely healed. Whomever she was dealing with was a civilian at best, at worst she was the least injured and therefor least likely to die from not getting treated with chakra. Her ribs were bound and so was her head.

She opened her eyes and gingerly sat up. She glanced around her taking in the smallish room she was laying in. She noticed the other three right away but ignored them in favor of searching the room. There were three windows about three feet wide each and about four feet tall, all three sat against the far wall opposite of the dark cherry door and about four feet from the ground. All three windows had drawn curtains that were a light green shade letting in the very little light the bedroom (because there was a single bed in the room, just big enough for four kids.), other than the bed, the windows and a few darkened square shapes on the wall the room was empty.

She had turned back to the other three when one of them shifted and lifted himself up to sit against the wall. Green clashed with gray and red. Her eyes widened.

"Kakashi?" He tilted his head to the left a little bit.

"Sakura?" His voice wasn't the same, but neither was hers.

"Why do you look like a four year old?" She questioned ignoring the way her voice cracked at the end.

"I could ask you the same thing." He stated before looking down at the other two prone bodies on the bed with them. "Sasuke, Naruto." His brow furrowed. "Looks like they are in the same boat."

A knock on the door forced Sasuke's eyes open and nearly made Sakura jump. She turned to the doorway when it softly opened. A child stood on the other side. Her Ash-blue eyes wide with wonder. "_I knew it." _She turned back around into the darkness of just beyond the door. "_Mommy, I told you!" _She whisper shouted down the hallway.

She let herself in the room. She didn't look much older than any of them. Her hair was in loose pale blonde spikes around her head that ended about chin level and had rounded cheeks. A small puckered mouth under a button nose and long pale eyelashes that brushed her cheeks whenever she blinked. The child was wearing a tee shirt and leggings both in the color of green. Sakura nearly shuttered just thinking about how much Gai and Lee would have swooned at the sight.

The child put her hands on her hips, "_You all gave us such a scare dropping on the roof like you did."_

Sakura held up her hand. "Gomen?" None of what the little girl was saying made any sense.

The girl's eyes widened, "Gomen, I didn't realize you spoke Japanese."

Sasuke had sat up by that point, he was giving the other child the stank eye.

"My mom and I found you on our roof in the middle of the night." The child frowned, "You made a lot of noise banging on the roof like you did. We thought it was going to cave in."

"We are sorry." Kakashi spoke with a sheepish look on his face, "What were you speaking when you first entered the room?" Sakura could see the calculating gleam in his eyes.

"English." She tilted her head to the left a bit, "You don't know what English is?"

"No." Sakura shook her head and nudged Naruto with her foot out of the other girl's sight.

The child's eyes lit up and she clapped her hands together in front of her body, "I knew it!"

The door swung open again. "Knew what Musume?" A woman about three feet taller than the child walked in. Her legs were long and thin, just like the rest of her body. She wore a white lab coat over a white button up that both of them were rolled up to her elbows and slightly wrinkled from wear, black slacks that was both form fitting and loose at the same time. She was barefoot and had stress wrinkles on her lightly tanned skin. Her black hair was tied tightly back behind her head and reading glasses hanging from her neck.

"Last night, it wasn't just the Justice League! It was an actual black hole." The daughter laughed gleefully.

The woman sighed. "Mika, could you perhaps go and make our guests something to eat?"

Mika's shoulders drooped slightly. "Hai, Okaa-sama." Mika walked out.

The woman's shoulders dropped and she pinched the bridge of her nose. "I didn't really know what to think when the neighbors were calling and telling stories about sand and strange weapons falling from the sky. It was about midnight and dark, how in the world can three old senile couples see all of that? Then came the crashes." The woman looked over her hand at the each of them, passing over Naruto's sleeping form. "Please tell you four did not just jump through a worm hole." The woman practically begged.

"We aren't a bunch of idiots." Sasuke snapped.

The woman straightened out. "I am not calling you an idiot. The science behind worm holes is still just myth. We are working on it though." The woman placed her hands on her hips mirroring her daughters earlier stance. "I do not want to know your secrets, I'm a builder not a researcher. There are somethings I believe must stay mysterious."

Sakura blinked slightly confused.

"I am offering you four a place to stay and a place to learn if you would like to." The woman walked to the door. "You all could stay with my daughter and I." She placed her hand on the door. "Just think about it for a moment. I'll give you some time."

_"Momma! There's some one at the door for you!" _Mika's voice traveled into the room from the open door.

"My name is Nori Tsukino." Nori spoke to them before exiting the room.

>"Wake up, Naruto." Sakura kicked the blond off of the bed.

"Good you're awake." She crossed her very short arms.

Naruto sat up from the floor rubbing his face from the meeting with the floor. "Sakura-chan..." His blue eyes landed on her tiny form. "What the fuck! You're not Sakura!" He jumped to his feet and pointed a finger in her face.

"Naru-baka, it's me." Sakura batted his hand out of her face. "We just all have been deaged by a few years."

A snort came from behind her. Naruto turned his head to the speaker and nearly shrieked. "Kakashi-sensei! You're-you're."

"Tiny?" His eyebrow raised and he folded his arms across his chest.

A sparkle shown in his blue eyes as he shook his head rapidly, "You're not wearing a mask, dattebayo!"

Kakashi deadpanned in the blink of an eye and Sakura's palm met her forehead. "Baka."

"What?" Naruto demanded placing his hands on his hips.

"Idiot." Sasuke supplied before leaning forward from the wall. "You're in a four year body. We all are."

Naruto blinked twice then looked down at his short body and then back at the three sitting on the bed. "Why?"

"We aren't sure but that thing Kaguya opened took us to a completely different world." Sakura explained with a frown.

"A woman with her daughter had been taking care of us in our unconscious state." Kakashi added.

Sakura nodded, "Yes Nori Tsukino-san and Mika-chan." Then Sakura gestured to the small table that looked like it was dragged in. "Mika-chan made us food to eat and brought water."

Naruto perked up at the word food.

"Naruto, you were the first one through, what do you remember?" She started off gently.

Naruto paused in his speedy maneuver to get closer to the sandwiches. "Not much, just pain and then nothing. Until you shoved me off the bed." He gave her a pout.

Silence fell and Naruto resumed his food hunt.

"What are we going to do?" Sasuke broke the somber silence.

"Obviously in this world we know nothing." Kakashi started and pushed himself off the wall. "We are physically the age of about four, I don't think we are 'adult' material in this world." He folded his hands in his lap. "Nori-san gave us an option of staying with her and Mika-chan. We should stay and learn as much as possible before we make any more moves."

"Recon?" Sasuke raised his eyebrow.

"More like information gathering." Sakura corrected lightly.

"Exactly." Kakashi smiled.

"Mika-chan makes excellent food. Think she'll cook for us more?" Naruto asked with a brilliant smile.

>Both OC's are indeed JapaneseEnglish ancestry. Mika's father was Japanese with a father who was also Japanese and a mother who was American. Nori is both Japanese and English decent in very much the same way except her father was the American.

This is just a prologue. I will be skipping a good amount of years for the sake of the story. If I get enough support I will upload a 'side story' of basically the four regrowing up alongside Mika with Nori's parenting. **

Also I would like to let you all know that as of this moment no pairings have been decided.

I do not own Naruto or the Young Justice. I only own Nori, Mika, and any other OC's I put into this.

>"Mika." Unfocused ash-blue eyes looked up from the letter in her hands.

"Hmm?" Her eyes dragged right back down to the letter. She heard a low chuckle and on impulse she pursed her lips and narrowed her eyes up at her younger brother.

"Mika, we asked what it was that you got." Sakura said gently taking a seat on the armrest next to Mika.

A dazzling smile took over Mika's face as she handed Kakashi the letter, his hand open for the paper. "It's from Star Labs in New York. Remember when I sent in that Translator bot? Well they finally got around to answering me."

"It says here that they'd like you to come on their research team." Kakashi spoke glancing up from the papers. "They're impressed you were able to create something that could learn and adapt to patterns in new dialect and specifically Dr. Bone head of Auto-robotics in Philadelphia."

Mika giggled slightly, "It's so amazing it doesn't feel real. They even said I could have my own robotics lab."

"That's amazing!" Sakura said gleefully and wrapped her arms around Mika's shoulders tightly. "Just wait until Sasuke and Naruto find out."

"Well, Sakura finished Stanford. I don't think it'd be hard for her to transfer those records to Harvard. The drive would be very similar to what she was doing in the first place. Sasuke and Naruto could probably find something to do out there as well." Kakashi listed on his fingers as he took a seat next to Mika squishing the both of them into the slightly wider than normal armchair.

Mika looked a little wide eyed. "You'd move out there with me?"

"Of course. Couldn't let our older sister start an amazing adventure with out us, now could we?" Sakura asked placing her chin on Mika's shoulder despite the awkward angle considering how short the older girl was.

"An amazing adventure? Oh count me in!" Naruto announced his presence before the sound of the door closing could be heard.

"Mika was invited to Star Labs in Philadelphia." Kakashi explained with a soft smile that crinkled the edges of his eyes.

Naruto and Sasuke entered the room, "Like as in a tour?" Sasuke asked dropping his bag on the floor.

"Oh ew. Put that in the laundry room Sasuke." Mika complained, "and no not like a tour. I sent in my Translator bot and they countered with an offer of working at their lab."

"So when are we moving?" Naruto asked with a giant smile on his face placing his hands behind his head.

>2064 Kingston Street Philadelphia, Pennsylvania had a pool and immediately Naruto was sold on it.

"What about that other one on Emerald Street?" Sakura asked sipping on an iced tea through a blue bendy straw.

"That one didn't have a pool." Naruto pouted from across the table.

"The one on Elfreth's Alley I personally liked the best." Kakashi mentioned over the unfolded map he and Mika were sharing.

"Which one?" Sasuke asked rubbing the side of his head.

"Either one, but 133 would probably be the most convenient one to get to." Kakashi looked up and met Sasuke's eyes.

Mika rolled her eyes. "Personally I'd rather have the one on Kingston Street. It's walking distance to a park for the boys and I could walk to work or ride whichever I feel like for that day." She pointed out Star labs, "Just six blocks away. Elfreth's alley is cute but that's miles away. I actually didn't like how much of a fixer upper the one on Emerald Street was. Plus the Kingston house price was lower than our budget."

"Okay, pros for the Kingston House," Sasuke picked up his own ice tea from the table. "It's got a pool. It's perfectly placed for both park walking and Mika's job. It has a yard. Cons; not a lot of space, and kind of close to the train tracks."

Sakura rolled her eyes, "Obviously Naruto and Mika are sold on the idea. What do you and Kakashi think?"

Sasuke shrugged. "I don't care."

"If we were planning on continuing what we started in Vegas than I suggest the one on Kingston Street or Emerald Street. The ones on Elfreth's Alley are a bit too close together for no one to not notice." Kakashi had lowered his voice and let out a sigh.

Mika looked over at him meaningfully. "Over here you should all think about a costume and alias's."

Kakashi closed his red eye and placed a hand over it. "I know."

"If we think about it in that way. The one on Kingston has large trees blocking most of the yard and back of the building from pedestrians and anyone else looking for oddities." Sakura tapped her straw against the bottom of her lip. "The parking space is small though. We would only be able to bring our bikes."

Mika nodded. "I already thought about that. The Ram, Saturn, and the Explorer in Vegas at the house. I really don't want to sell the house."

Kakashi placed his hand on her shoulder and she gave him a weak smile in return.

"We could potentially rent out the house to college kids." Mika forged on, "we could keep the cars there or we could sell them. All three of them are worth more than five grand a piece."

"Our Ram would be more like fifteen grand." Sakura pointed out.

"More than enough to pay for the new furniture and the house with out having to dip into the money Mom left us." Sasuke took out the straw to his drink and pointed it at Kakashi.

"Does this mean we're getting the one on Kingston?" Naruto asked inching over his beverage to attempt to look at all of them in the eyes at once.

Sakura sighed and crossed her arms after setting down her tea. "Yes, Naruto, we're going to live in the house with a pool." Even she couldn't keep the smile off of her face.

>Okay so time skip. At this point Mika is 17 and team 7 are 16, Nori has been deceased for a year. Mika graduated high school at age 10 and now had her MD in Robotics. Sakura graduated high school at age 10 and now has a PHD in Physical Therapy and now has plans for returning to school to become a surgeon. Sasuke graduated high school at age 15 and both are determined to become pro athletes. Kakashi graduated high school at age 9 and now has two degrees, one in Creative Writing and the other in English. Kakashi now writes books, he has written three separate children's books and two Young Adults Novels. He has all of Jiraiya's creations already written out and ready for publish when he becomes of age.

That was a lot but necessary. I plan on having a bit more 'family' bonding in the next chapter but after that Mika leaves the limelight more often and then the heroes are born. I've already got a name for Sakura.

Challenge: What should I give the boys as a superhero alias? Prize: A one-shot of your choice involving this story.

>"Athea." Mika pointed her pencil towards Sakura. They had gotten the house about a week ago and most of the furniture had been already bought and placed in the house, Sakura and Mika had volunteered to share the Master bedroom and the boys each got their own room.

Sakura looked over her shoulder at Mika while she clasped her black bra and slipping the straps on over her shoulders. "What?"

"It's Greek. It stands for healing, you could use it as your alias." Mika turned back around to her desk.

"I like it. Would I get a symbol to go with it?" Sakura walked over to Mika putting her hand on her shoulder. "What are you working on by the way?"

"New outfits." Mika moved the paper over to a place where Sakura could see the designs a lot better. "I plan on making it out of mech material, something that has pressure shields. Basically, I'm planning on making them more punch resistant."

"Instead of taking on the full brunt of the punch just a fraction of it?" Sakura asked turning to face Mika.

Mika nodded, "The only issue I'm facing now is how to make it a light and silent material that would make it work without shorting out because of your chakra." Mika blinked. "And could you please put on a shirt."

Sakura laughed, "Of course. Let us know when you get closer to cracking that part of the suit." Sakura wrapped Mika in a bear hug, "but I've got to go to Massachusetts. The Dean agreed to meet me and if all goes according to plan I'll be starting this fall."

"That's great just go put on a shirt now, please?"

>"How'd it go?" Kakashi asked as soon as he saw his sister's frame in the doorway.

Sasuke looked up then elbowed Naruto who pressed mute on the television.

"Well," Mika smiled coming into the room. "It went really well. They gave me a tour of the place and Dr. Bones personally showed me my lab. It's wonderful." Mika's ash-blue eyes went a little starry. "I get my own lab complete with my own tools."

Naruto laughed and the other boys chuckled at her. "Well, we're glad that everything worked out. Now just because you have your own lab doesn't mean you get to spend your entire time over there working. Your bed is here, please remember that." Kakashi stood up and enveloped her in his arms.

She let out a breathy chuckle, "Of course not. By the way, have any of you heard from Sakura yet?"

"No." Sasuke shook his head as Kakashi released her. "She told us she'd be back in about three more days with the news."

Mika frowned. "She does have a cell phone."

"Yes well, we all still don't like using them." Naruto waved the remote towards her.

Mika rolled her eyes. "I know, it makes it terribly inconvenient to get a hold of you."

"Well maybe sometimes we don't want to be found," Kakashi mentioned setting himself on the couch next to Naruto.

"Yeah, what he said." Naruto nodded his head.

Mika's eyes lit up, "I've been thinking about that. What do you guys think of Surge, Hydra, and Echo?" She planted herself on the coffee table facing the three of them. "I've been working on costume ideas-"

Kakashi placed his hand on her mouth. _"Best to not speak about that a loud, unless in code."_

Mika pushed his hand off her mouth. "_Okay, but as I was saying. I am working on designs that I'm going to incorporate pressure reducers in the armor. This way instead of the full force of a punch making the hit, it'd only be a fraction of that."_

Sasuke leaned forward and put his elbows on his knees. "_Have you figured out a way to get around our Chakra to stop the short circuiting?"_

_"I think so. I haven't built the prototype yet but I'm more struggling on how to make it lightweight and silent." _Mika reached into her bag for the blueprints.

_"You made my costume orange, right?" _Naruto bounced with a bright smile on his face.

_"Yes and no." _Mika sorted out the files in her hands and then turned one to face the three boys. "_For you, Naruto, I made sure to add some orange. The orange actually is just going to be accents to it. I was thinking that capes should be left out altogether, so instead I designed a Haori with a hood that I'm trying to figure out how to make it similar to an invisibility cloak. Underneath you would be wearing a sleeveless vest over the armor I'm working on. Your 'ninja' pouch would be expanded into a utility belt that you could have around your waist or slung across your chest. I kept the pants in the same style as the ones you all came here with but I think you should bandage the ends into the boots I'm going to modify. I plan on adding small hair like hooks that make walking up walls possible without Chakra."_

_"That'd be useful for when we're running low or in a stealth mission." _Kakashi blinked, Mika gave a big smile.

"_Exactly. Plus if you needed to you wouldn't be wasting your Chakra on something as keeping yourself hidden above ground." _

Naruto took the paper from her hands. "_It's just going to be outlined in orange?" _Mika nodded. "_Could we put orange flames on the end of the Haori?"_

_"Sure. Also, I was thinking about the name Hydra for you." _Mika pointed to the middle of the chest of the diagram on the sheet. "_We could put a dragon in a circle chasing its tail."_

_"Hydra. The dragon breeds that when one head is cut off two more grow in its place." _Naruto wondered out loud.

"_I thought it was a good symbolism to go with your favorite Jutsu." _Mika gave him a soft smile and placed her hands in her lap.

Naruto grinned, "_I like being a dragon."_

_"Of course." _Sasuke rolled his eyes. Naruto stuck out his tongue briefly before smiling like an idiot.

_"For your's Sasuke, I made a design that was more form fitting. It's not jumpsuit but close." _Mika took another paper from the pile and showed Sasuke. "_Basically, it's going to be a black sleeveless top with a tall fly away collar with light blue accents and your Katana holster would be on the Navy blue belt. I kept the pants the same as Naruto's. I'm also working on gloves that will be a conductor instead of an inhibitor for your Chidori. I was thinking about adding a few more weapons to your arsenal, but I wasn't sure if you wanted to add anything else."_

Sasuke took the blueprints from her. "Am I Surge or Echo?"

_"Surge." __Mika pointed at the diagram. "I am confident that you wouldn't need a symbol displayed on your chest, I think the light electric blue accents would be enough for them to figure it out."_

_"Hai," _Sasuke smirked and handed back the plans. "_I like it."_

_"Good." _Mika switched out Sasuke's plans with Kakashi's. "_I almost gave up on coming up with your name." _She turned to her gray-haired brother.

"_I assume Echo is from all the stories I've told you about," _Mika smiled and gave him a nod. "_It's better than the Copy Ninja."_

_"I thought so too. I actually didn't do anything very different from your ideal suit. The only thing I did was take away the swirl on the back and instead made it a circle with one inside of it. That and the boots I'm working on." _

Kakashi hummed and leaned over the prints. "Not bad."

Mika raised an eyebrow.

Kakashi chuckled. "_English has become a habit by now."_

_"Right." _Mika turned her attention towards the three of them as a whole. "_I was playing with the idea of masks but I couldn't figure out exactly how I wanted to do it. If anything it'd be domino masks that I can put different modes in like heat vision or infrared."_

"That'd be perfect," Kakashi commented and nudged Naruto. "_Best give that back to her. She'll get everything made for us."_

>"Aw man, she's going to kill me." Naruto whined looking at the rips in his new suit. "Just got it and now I've got bullet holes."

Sasuke jumped onto the branch next to him, "You do remember that she did say this was a test run for how well the wire netting works for the pressure shields, right?"

"Yes, but I don't think she had getting shot at on her list of things to test out." Naruto pulled his hood back and peeled the mask off his face with a frown.

"Where's Echo and Althea?" Naruto almost jumped out of the tree and Sasuke grabbed the hilt of his katana. Both of them looked down to see Mika in a lab coat her hands in her pockets.

"Shit, Mika." Naruto settled against the trunk of the tree slipping his mask into one of his utility pockets. "I think you need a bell."

Sasuke lets go of his blade and let himself fall from the tree to land silently in front of Mika. "Echo and Althea are dealing with a bunch of idiots."

She frowned before turning on her heel. Sasuke followed her to the back door, Naruto dropped down from the tree at the doorstep.

"How'd the mission go?" Mika asked opening the door and letting the three of them in.

"Eh, it didn't go as well as we had planned." Naruto rubbed the back of his neck and closed the door behind them.

Sasuke rolled his eyes, "The men saw us."

Mika looked over her shoulder at them, "You do realize if they talk to anyone, the Justice League will know about Surge and Hydra the two new vigilantes of Philadelphia."

Naruto pouted and Sasuke crossed his arms with a frown. "That Batman is probably going to do some serious digging and once he makes the connection between events that happened in Vegas and here. We are practically a neon sign saying Surge and Hydra live here!"

Mika turned towards them with a sigh. "It was going to happen one way or another." She reached over and grabbed both her brother's hands. "At least this way if Echo and Althea manage to keep themselves from being spotted they only have two names. That's it."

Naruto tugged Mika into his side making her let go of Sasuke's hand. He wrapped his arm around her shoulders with a frown, "but if Batman ends up finding out who we are, who is to say the guys we fight won't figure it out?"

"That would put you in serious danger." Sasuke headed towards the plush couches in the sitting room just beyond the foyer.

Naruto and Mika trailed after him. "Should I be concerned? All four of you taught me how to fight. I'm not a useless little flower." Mika frowned breaking away from Naruto and taking a seat on the coffee table.

"We know that." Kakashi spoke coming around the corner from the direction of the stairs. Sakura trailed after him.

Mika touched her fist to her chest, "I think I just had a heart attack."

Sakura giggled and sat down next to her. The pink haired girl was wearing a red battle dress that had no straps and ended about an inch past her bum. The top of the dress was a sweetheart neckline with gold trimmings that kept the dress tight to her small bustline. The dress was skin tight and flared out at the hips. Underneath she had chainmail covering her legs and boots that ended at mid thigh. On her hands were sturdy gloves that extended to her elbow. Over it all, she had a sleeveless white Haori that had a hood and a domino mask to match.

Kakashi took his mask off his face, "I think we should start your training up again."

Mika frowned, "Please tell me you didn't let those men see you."

Kakashi shrugged, "There was a lot more than we had anticipated. Turns out it's much harder not to be noticed in this city."

"Which is ironic considering we came from the city that never sleeps." Sakura leaned back on the coffee table, bracing herself with her hands.

"I wonder how long it's going to be before Gotham's Dark Knight comes to knocking on our front door," Mika muttered hanging her head.

"I give it about a week," Kakashi smiled taking a seat next to the other two boys.

Everyone shared a good laugh.

"Okay besides the obvious mistakes how'd everything go tonight?" Mika rubbed the side of her face looking up at the boys.

"My armor worked really well up until I tried making clones." Naruto said sheepishly. "I think I fried it." He held up his hands, "I didn't do it on purpose! Plus the material is ripped because some bastard had a gun."

Sasuke rolled his eyes, "My armor worked just fine, even after using my Chidori. My only issue was the boots. They didn't have any grip to them at all."

"Weird. Mine had too much traction to them." Sakura put her finger to her mouth and bit down, "I had to use Chakra to disconnect myself from the surface of anything. It felt like I was trudging through mud trying to move anywhere. I didn't get to test out my armor, though. I was too busy trying to get off the ceiling."

Kakashi chuckled, "My armor didn't work at all. I might have actually fried it trying to put the damn thing on in the first place."

Mika burst out laughing. "Okay so test run number one is a failure. How'd your boots hold up Kakashi? And your's, Naruto?"

"Mine worked just fine," Kakashi shrugged.

"I actually didn't get a chance to use mine. I was too busy trying to keep a guy from putting a bullet into me." Naruto folded his arms.

"Okay, these were just prototypes. I'll take them back to the lab tomorrow and recalibrate them. I've got a better idea for the armor, I'm not sure it'll work. I can't really rule it out without trying it first, though." Mika stood up from the coffee table and stretched her arms above her head.

Kakashi frowned, "Mika. Why do you have a bandage on your arm?"

"Huh?" Mika looked down at him confused for a split second before recognition flitted over her face. "Dr. Bones wanted all of us to send in a blood sample to test for drugs since a numbskull trashed the breakroom. Don't worry about it."

>Okay, thank you, Guest reviewer. I didn't realize I labeled Kakashi as a teen in the first chapter. I was actually referring to, in the summary and the beginning of the story towards was this part of the timeline. The only age people in this world know Kakashi as is a teenager because of this I put he was a teenager in the summary.

I just wanted to say thank you to all those of you who have favorited and followed this story. It actually makes me work faster towards a new chapter if someone gives me positive feedback.

I struggled to come up with orginal names for team 7. Something I haven't seen a bunch of people using for their aliases in this x-over. I hope they are satifactory for you all. Let me know what you guys think and I'll try and have the next chapter up soon.
